

Nearly 2 weeks later and I still constantly think about that day. I'd like to share something with you. I was there as a guardian. I served in the Air Force and was in Afghanistan. While at the Air Force memorial I stood at the granite of the memorial and was able to touch the engraving of the word Afghanistan, while doing so I look to my left and could see where the plane hit the Pentagon. It brought closure for me that I had no idea I even needed. It all made sense. So, although I was there as a guardian and was there to serve my veteran, it took on a whole new level for me. I appreciate your organization and will continue to support it. Thank you so much for all you do."
